RUDDER POST OF LUKA WAS BROKEN

Little Schooner Was 11 Days Without Sight Of Any Land

After cruising around for three days looking in vain for the schooner Luka, which had been reported in distress by the Coptic, the Manning returned to this port at 1:30 p. m. yesterday and only a short time later, at 3 o'clock, a message was received from Waimanalo that the Luka was lying off the reef at that point at anchor. Captain Joyner of the Manning made a thorough search of the district in which the Coptic had seen the Luka but while he covered a section of the ocean 1200 miles in length, in parallelgrams 15 miles long and three miles in width, was unable to catch a sight of the little boat.

The Manning returned here yesterday to take on more coal and was then going out again to continue the search but was relieved of this task by the telephone message announcing the Luka's safety. The tug Intrepid made the run to Waimanalo and brought in the Luka, arriving this morning at 1:30. Capt. Moki states that while the long trip was a good deal of a strain, that, thanks to the provisions which were obtained from the Coptic, there was no suffering.

According to Mate James K. Ulunalele, the Luka's crew were very lucky to get off as easily as they did. In speaking of the trip he said: "We left this city for Hilo on January 9 and had pleasant weather, though the winds were not just what we wanted, till January 16, when we were off Molokai and it became pretty rough. Then our trouble happened; the rudder post broke inside the casing, where we could not get at it to make repairs and the rudder began to thresh from side to side. Of course the Luka was unmanageable and we had to get along as well as we could till the seas quieted down. Then two of us went overboard and tried to fix the rudder, which had become jammed on the post side. "It was stuck so hard that there was nothing that we could do and we tried our best to fix things up so that we could reach shore. We did not have a very large amount of provisions on board and when we sighted the Coptic we had left only half a case of crackers and about 50 gallons of water. The night before, at 11 o'clock we sighted a steamer which I believe was the Sierra but she did not see us. "We were very lucky to have the Coptic observe our signals as it was very smoky and if she had been a mile further away she would never have seen us. We tried to signal the Sierra but she could not make us out. "We saw no land for eleven days and the one day when we had in the crew went nearly crazy on this account and tried to tear his clothes off and to tear himself with his finger nails. When we got within sight of land he became himself again and is now all right. "We caught two sharks while we were drifting around and that gave us a little something to eat. One of these was a monster and was about ten feet long and nearly six feet wide. I have his backbone and will make a walking stick out of it. "We finally rigged a jury rudder out of the boom and managed to make enough headway to reach Waimanalo and then telephoned in and the Intrepid came out and helped us in. All the members of the crew, of whom there are four, which, with Capt. Moses Kalama and myself makes six, are all right and none the worse for our trip.

DEAD SOLDIER HONORED

The anniversary of the death of General Lawton at San Mateo, Rizal, will be observed by special memorial services at Lawton Post, Wednesday evening, December 19.

An order has been authorized by Post Commander W. W. Lewis and issued by Adjutant T. R. Masterson directing that as many as possible of the veterans be in attendance that evening.

General Lawton was killed on the morning of December 19, 1899. He had left Manila the night before and marched through a drizzling rain until daylight in the morning. He wore a big yellow raincoat and a white helmet that made him a conspicuous figure for the enemy's marksmen. He was shot in the heart and died almost immediately in the arms of his personal staff.

Before he went on his last like his name had been put in nomination by President McKinley for a brigadier's star. A cablegram advising General Lawton to that effect had been received shortly before he started for Marikina, but Ots, for some reason, kept the news from General Lawton and he went to his death without the knowledge that his highest ambition in life had been gratified.

Lawton Post, Veteran Army of the Philippines, was named in his memory. No soldier was more generally beloved during life nor so soldier's memory held in greater reverence than that of the late General Lawton. Every year on the anniversary of his sacrifice to his country's flag, memorial services are held by the veterans of Lawton post, to which all veterans are invited and on Decoration Day each year the monument erected on the spot where he fell is smothered in sweet blossoms.—Manila American, December 21.

THE BUSINESS MAN'S HANDY IN-DEX, published in the Saturday Bulletin and the Weekly Edition, gives a concise and complete resume of all legal notices, calls for tenders, judgments, building permits and real estate transactions. Evening Bulletin, 75¢ per month. Weekly Bulletin, $1 per year.
